/A/ - mid central non-palatal non-labial vowel, like Hindi, Telugu, or accented English <A>. /A/ occurs finally only in prefixes e.g. /A-/ `possessive', /A-/ `non-3rd person plural', and is never final in lexical morphemes or words. /A-/ prefixes before /A/ coalesce as /a/, e.g. /algamlay/ `we spoke with each other' from //A-Al-gam-l-ay// `plural-reciprocal-speak-past-1st person', or /ayO/ `his fish' from //A-AyO// `possessive-fish'. /A/ also optionally becomes /a/ when it is lengthened by accent or expressive drawling, e.g. with initial accent, /a-si?iG-An/ beside /A-si?iG-An/ `his house' (`possessive-house-article'). /A/ unaccented in nonfinal syllables is often elided before liquids, e.g. /tr+b-An/ beside /tAr+b-An/ `cloud' (`cloud-article'), /sitri-n/ beside /sittAri-n/ `millet' (`millet-article'). /A/ is the regular Sora substitute for non-final /A/ in words borrowed from other languages, but /a/ is used for final /A/. This is also true in older borrowings from Oriya, where Oriya now has /O/, e.g. Sora /pARAsa/, current Oriya /pONOsO/, cf. Hindi /pANAsA/; in current borrowings from Oriya, Soras use /O/ for Oriya /O/. ??Add Munda correspondences.

<A>(D) {PX} ``^plural''. |Prefix of verbs which require subject-concord (i.e. the classes V(lay) and V(lenay)), expressing the plurality of a 1st pl. exclusive (<AnlEn> `^we') or 2nd pl. <amben> `^you') ^subject, e.g. <A-jom-l-ay> `we (excl.) ate (it)' (contrast <jom-l-ay> `I ate (it)', <jom-lA-be> `we (incl.) ate (it)'), <A-jom-l-E> `you (pl.) ate (it)' (contrast <jom-l-E> `you (sg.) ate (it)'); this prefix coalesces with a following <A> as , e.g. <<A-AReb-bAb-le-n>> -> <aReb-bAb-le-n> `we shook our heads', <<A-Ab-jom-l-ay-ji>> -> <ab-jom-l-ay-ji> `we fed (it) to them'; it precedes all other prefixes in the verb, e.g. <<A-AD-jom-l-E>> -> <aD-jom-l-E> `you (pl.) didn't eat (it)', <<A-ADn-Ar-gAlAm-l-E>> -> <aDn-Ar-gAlAm-l-E> `you (pl.) didn't understand each other'; the plurality of 3d pl. subjects is expressed by the suffix <ji>. #651.

<A>(D) {PX} ``^possessive, ^genitive''. |(1) Prefix of nouns or noun phrases marking them as alienably or inalienably possessed by the preceding 3rd person noun or noun phrase, e.g. <mAnra-n A-bOGtEl-An> `the man's buffalo', <mAnra-n A-+nsAlO-n> `the man's wife', <mAnra-n A-u?u-n> `the man's hair', <anin A-u?u-n> `his hair', usually simply <A-u?u-n>, <mAnra-n A-su?uG-An A-k+ntal-An-ji> `the walls of the man's house', <A-k+ntal-An-ji> `(its) walls', <A-+nsAlO-n-ji> `his wives', or `their wife', or `their wives' (the ambiguity being due to the ambiguous scope of <ji>); the noun form to which <A> is prefixed is usually the absolute form, but some (not all) nouns with combining forms use these, e.g. <A-mO?OD-An> or <A-mAD-An> `his eye'; in some of the latter, the possessive-plus-combining form construction has been reinterpreted as absolutive, e.g. <AjeG> as in <<A-AjeG>> -> <ajeG> `his foot', originally <A-jeG> `his foot', cf. <je?eG>/<jeG> in other dialects. (2) Prefix of certain noun compounds expressing possession of the second member of the compound by the first, e.g. <A-ji-ra> `ivory' (lit. `poss.-tooth-elephant'), <A-mAD-Da> `tear' (lit. poss.-eye-water), <A-jEl-bOG> `buffalo meat' (`poss.-meat-buffalo'), <A-Da-bOG> `buffalo broth' (`poss.-water-buffalo'), <A-On-bOG> `buffalo calf' (lit. `poss.f-offspring-buffalo')''. *\^V018 Sa.<a?>, Kh.<a?> genitive suffix; original Possessor<-Ag> Possessed construction has been reinterpreted as Possessor <A->Possessed, with a switch from suffix to prefix; cf. Eng.<zounds>, said to be from ~<(God)?s wounds>; this prepared the way for the use of the prefix as an expression of inalienable possession. Cf. <atE> genitive suffix, e.g. <JEn-atE> `mine.' #661.

<Ab>\\<Oab>(D) {N} ``^greens''. #49542.

/b/ - fortis voiced bilabial stop, IPA [b], like Oriya, Hindi, or French [b]. /b/ is the regular substitute for /b/ or /bh/ in Oriya words, and for /v/ in Hindi or English words. It is regularly affricated to [bB] before the [B]-like Sora /u/ vowel. Word- and syllable-finally, like other voiced stops, /b/ is unreleased, glottalized, and devoiced, even before voiced consonants and usually even in a geminate e.g. /ebba/ `thorn'. Before /s/ it is simply devoiced, as in /ObsEG-ber-/ `to translate'. Since /p/, like other voiceless sounds, does not occur finally in Sora, this is not a neutralization. Thus Sora uses /b/ also for final /p/, /ph/, and /f/ in borrowed words, cf. /paEb/ `(water or gas) pipe' from English <pipe>. Before a homorganic stop, /b/ may lose its labial closure and appear simply as a glottal stop.

/D/ - fortis voiced alveolar or retroflex stop, IPA [D], like Oriya or Hindi [D]. The retroflexion, an almost pan-Munda characteristic of the voiced stop /d/ as opposed to the voiceless stop /t/, seems to result somehow from an expansion of the closed oral cavity to preserve the strong voicing of the /d/. Sora /D/ does not alternate with /R/ intervocalically as in many Indian languages; although Sora /R/ occurs only intervocalically, it has no phonological relation with /D/. /D/ is the regular substitute for /d/, /dh/, /D/, and /Dh/ in Oriya words, and for /_/ in English words. In some dialects /D/ is palatalized to [j], merging with /j/, after palatal consonants, e.g. /gijja/ probably for */gij-Da/ `to wash' (with /-Da/ `water'), /b+JjO/ beside /b+JDO/ `but'. Word- and syllable-finally, like other voiced stops, /D/ is unreleased, glottalized, and devoiced, even before voiced consonants and usually even in a geminate e.g. /kaDDu/ `bracelet'. Before /s/ it is simply devoiced, as in /gAD-sAr-gaj/ `cut-paddy-month'. Since /t/, like other voiceless sounds, does not occur finally in Sora, this is not a neutralization.

Sora uses the sequence /Ds/ as the regular substitute for intervocalic /c/ and /ch/ in Oriya words, e.g. /mAriDsa/ for Oriya /mOricO/ `chilli'. And it uses /D/ for final /t/, /th/, /T/, /Th/, and /0/ in foreign words, as well as for /d/, /dh/, /D/, /Dh/. An epenthetic /D/ appears between /n/ and /r/ in Sora; indeed most Soras pronounce /r/ as [Dr] everywhere except after a vowel.

/R/ - voiced retroflex flap, IPA [R], as in Hindi and Oriya. /R/ occurs only between vowels in Sora morphemes, but it is not, as in many Indian languages, a weakened intervocalic variety of /D/ but an independent phoneme, contrast /taRa/ `ancient' with /taDa-/ `to strain'. /R/ is used as a substitute for intervocalic /L/ and /N/ as well as /R/ in Oriya words. Several nouns with /R/ have /l/ instead in their truncated combining forms, e.g. /moRa/, combining form /-mol/ `mist, fog'.

/g/ - fortis voiced velar stop, IPA [g], like Oriya, Hindi, or French [g], palatal in syllables with palatal vowels, and often spirantized after vowels. Thus in the peculiar syncopated pronunciations of /bagu-sOa/ `200' and /yagi-sOa/ `300', where the /g /'s are also devoiced, we hear [baxsOa] and [yacsOa]. /g/ is the regular substitute for /g/ or /gh/ in Oriya words. In Sora, Munda /g/ at the end of morphemes has been lost without a trace, and it occurs syllable-finally only as a result of syncope (as above) or in geminates e.g. /miggAl/, a variant of /miygAl/ `twelve'. In foreign words a word- or syllable-final /g/ may be spirantized and devoiced, as above, or unreleased, glottalized, and devoiced, as Sora /b/ and /d/ are in these positions. As this suggests, Soras perceive final [k], [kh], or [x], as well as [g] and [gh], in foreign words, as /g/.

/j/ - fortis voiced alveo-palatal affricate, IPA [d3], like Oriya and Hindi [j]. /j/ is the regular substitute for /j/ and /jh/ in Oriya words, as well for /3/ and /z/ in English words. Word- and syllable-finally, like the other voiced obstruents, Sora
/j/ is glottalized, and may be unreleased and devoiced, especially before another palatal, e.g. in /ijja/ `no'. But elsewhere it is more often simplified to a glottal occlusion with its palatality clearly marked by the palatal glide induced by it (as by /J/) in its preceding syllabic. This pronunciation of final /j/ as a palatalized glottal stop or glottalized [y] is found in several Munda languages.

/k/ - fortis unaspirated voiceless velar stop, IPA [k], like Oriya, Hindi, Spanish or French [k], palatal in syllables with palatal vowels. It is not voiced or spirantized by its context, though it may be affricated to [kx] before the /u/ vowel. /k/ is the regular substitute used for /k/ or /kh/ in Oriya or Hindi words, or for /q/ in Urdu words. Like other voiceless phonemes in Sora, it does not occur finally in morphemes or words. It occurs finally in syllables only as the first half of a geminate /kk/, as in /kukkur/ `dove', such clusters having arisen historically mainly, as in this reduplicated word, from consonantal assimilation.

/p/ - fortis unaspirated voiceless bilabial stop, IPA [p], like Oriya, Hindi, Spanish or French [p]. It is not voiced or spirantized by its context, though it may be affricated to [po] before the /u/ vowel. /p/ is the regular substitute used for /p/ or /ph/ in Oriya words, and for /f/ in English words, except in final position, where /b/ is used. This is because /p/, like other voiceless phonemes in Sora, does not occur finally in morphemes or words. It occurs finally in syllables only as the first half of a geminate (long) /pp/, as in /pAppAr/ `locust', such clusters having arisen historically mainly, as in this redupliicated word, from consonantal assimilation.

/s/ - fortis voiceless alveolar sibilant, IPA [s], like Oriya, Hindi, or English [s], often an affricate [ts] where no vowel precedes, e.g. initially or after /n/. It is neither voiced nor palatalized by its context. /s/ is the regular substitute used for /$/ in foreign words, and for /c/ or /ch/ as well (except intervocalically where /ds/ is used), whereas /j/ is used for English /z/. Like other voiceless phonemes in Sora, it does not occur finally in morphemes or words, and occurs finally in syllables only as the first half of a (rare) geminate /ss/, as in the Oriya loan /basse-/ `to refuse'. Sora shows a few internal traces of having lost certain original /s/'s under unclear circumstances, as in /-im/, the productive combining form of /kAnsim/ `chicken'; the expected /-sim/ occurs only in /AdrE-sim/ `chicken egg'.

/T/ - fortis unaspirated voiceless dental stop, IPA [t], like Oriya, Hindi, Spanish or French [t]. /t/ is the regular substitute used for /t/, /th/, /T/, and /Th/ in Oriya words, and for /0/ in English words. Like other voiceless phonemes in Sora, it does not occur finally in morphemes or words. It occurs finally in syllables only as the first half of a geminate /tt/, as in /bAttOG-/ `to frighten', such clusters having arisen historically mainly, as in this word, from /bAtOG-/ `to fear' with the causative infix /-b-/, from consonantal assimilation.

/o/ - tense (higher) mid back rounded vowel, IPA [o], like Oriya <o>, Hindi <o:>, and the close <o> of French <beau> or German <Boot>. <o> is often raised under accent but because it is round (pouted) it remains distinct from the high back nonround labial phoneme , e.g. <o?o> [o?o] or [u?u] `yes', vs. <u?u> [U?U] `hair'. Usually shortened to high back round nonsyllabic <w> before vowels, particularly before , e.g. <oa> [oa] or [wa] `father'; this is not characteristic of . But the <O> phoneme is often raised to [o] or shortened to [w] under similar circumstances, in which case it coincides with <o>, e.g. <O?On> [O?On] or [o?on] `child', <lOaG> [lOaG] or [loaG] `iron'. <o>, like other back vowels, is always nasalized after nasals, e.g. <omoD> [omo~'T] `smoke'. ??Add Munda correspondences.

/u/ - tense high back labial vowel, IPA [U], the lips being approximated to each other flat, not rounded or protruded. (It is comparable to the  of Japanese or the long  of Swedish <hus>, the latter sometimes called `in-rounded'.) It is labial as opposed to <+>, e.g. <??>, and high as opposed to <o>, e.g. <u?u> `hair' vs. <o?o> `yes'. Obstruents preceding  are often affricated, particularly labials, e.g. <buGbuG-boD> [bBUGbBUGbo'T] `a bee-like insect'. Like other back vowels,  is always nasalized after nasals, e.g. <mu?u> [mU~'U~] `nose'. ??Add Munda correspondences.
